3. Buying behavior

Why do we buy things?

Sometimes we buy because of needs – things we must have, like food and medicine. Other times we buy because of wants – things we would like to have. Our buying behavior is influenced by emotions, by friends and family, by social media and by marketing strategies. Supermarkets, for example, put expensive products at eye level and sweets near the checkout, where children can see them. Impulse buying happens when we buy something we had not planned to buy. Making a shopping list and setting a budget can help you control it.
